Maryland Inventor to Exhibit “Animal Sounds Whistles” at America’s Largest Invention Show

PITTSBURGH... InventHelp’s INPEX®, America’s Largest Invention Trade Show, announces that Erik Roberts, from Bowie, Md., has invented a novelty whistle for children that mimic an animal’s sound. This invention will be exhibited at INPEX® 2008, June 11-14, in downtown Pittsburgh.

When young children are learning about animal sounds, they love to try and bark like a dog or moo like a cow. The “Animal Sounds Whistles” could help teach children about the different sounds that animals make. The design of the whistle would resemble the head of an animal. When the child blows into the whistle, it makes the same noise that the animal makes.

The Animal Sounds Whistles are made of plastic, and would feature many different animals, such as lions, elephants or other barnyard animals. The design and concept are the same of a conventional whistle. To use, a child simply blows on the whistle, and the corresponding animal noise is made.

The inventor came up with the idea because he watched children around him trying to imitate animals. “I watched children trying to learn how to make the different animal sounds,” he said. “I thought this would be a fun way for them to learn about the different sounds that animals make.”

Roberts is exhibiting at INPEX® with the hopes of finding a distributor or licensee.

INPEX®, The Invention Show, is a unique trade show that showcases new products and innovations that are available to business and industry to manufacture, license or distribute. As part of the tradeshow, The Invention Show sponsors INPEX® Inventors University™, a series of seminars, presentations, and panel discussions to provide information that inventors may find useful in pursuing their ideas. This year, INPEX® will be held at the David L. Lawrence Convention Center in downtown Pittsburgh, the world’s largest “green,” environmentally-friendly building.
