Alabama Inventor to Exhibit “J-Bands” at America’s Largest Invention Show

PITTSBURGH... InventHelp’s INPEX®, America’s Largest Invention Trade Show, announces that Erik Mehren from Tuskegee, AL, has invented a shoe accessory that will add style while keeping pants legs from dragging on the ground. This patented invention will be exhibited at INPEX® 2010, June 16-18, at the Monroeville Convention Center in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania.

While “J-Bands” can add style to clothing, this fashion accessory can also be worn to show off shoes, boots or sandals because of its ability to prevent pant legs from dragging. This invention is currently available in department stores and by visiting www.triwearegear.com for $9.99.

Comprised of plastic, rubber, elastic and cloth, this device is comfortable and can be worn while simply taking a stroll, skateboarding, rollerblading or riding a bike. A company or desired logo may also be placed or engraved on the center portion of the J-Band.

“While walking in my area, I noticed that quite a few people just simply let their pants drag on the ground over their shoes. I felt that this invention was a need among those people and in the area of fashion and accessories as well,” said the inventor.

Mr. Mehren is exhibiting at INPEX® with the hopes of finding a manufacturer and licensee.
